Assessed contributions received from United Nations Member States to date for the regular budget are "just sufficient to meet cash requirements through the last week of May", states Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali in a new report on the United Nations financial situation.

In an addendum to his report to the General Assembly, dated 15 May, the Secretary-General says the situation "has become worse" over the past few months, owing in particular to the initiation or expansion of complex tasks in the areas of peace-keeping. At the end of April, unpaid assessed contributions totalled $1.89 billion.

The "extremely precarious" situation, the Secretary-General points out, is due to the "continuing failure" of member countries to pay their assessed contributions to the regular budget and to peace-keeping activities. He reports that it was necessary throughout last year to draw upon the reserves of the Organization to meet current operating requirements. In addition, funds have been borrowed from the few peace-keeping operations that had cash in excess of their immediate requirements.

The Secretary-General states that, this year, the ongoing difficulties have been exacerbated by vastly increased requirements for peace-keeping operations, as well as delays in payments of assessments, "particularly by some of the major contributors".

In a statement issued by his Spokesman today, the Secretary-General said that "only the prompt payment of assessments by those Member States who have not yet done so, not internal borrowing or other stop-gap measures, can provide the necessary resources to meet the cash requirements of the Organization in the immediate future". He said that, as of today, only 14 countries had fully paid their assessments for both the regular budget and for peace-keeping operations. They were: Austria, Bhutan, Botswana, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Ghana, Liechtenstein, Malaysia, Namibia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, and Sweden.

The Security Council was meeting this afternoon at the request of Cuba to consider the item of "the terrorist activities which are being conducted against Cuba and which are promoted, encouraged or tolerated by the Government of the United States".

Cuba made the request on 27 April in a letter which demanded that the Security Council condemn the "sabotage of the Cubana de Avación aircraft" which was destroyed in mid-flight near Barbados in October 1976. The letter charged that the United States was involved in the plane's downing which killed 73 people.

The Cuban Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada, said in the letter that "not to condemn that act would dishonour the Council and undermine its prestige and credibility".

The Cuban letter was addressed to the President of the Security Council.

A United Nations spokesman announced today that the Secretary-General had received a letter from Lord Carrington, the European Community mediator, saying that he was resuming his efforts to try and find a political solution to the conflict in Yugoslavia.

The Secretary-General had replied in a letter reaffirming the support of the United Nations for his efforts and stressing once again the division of labour between the two Organizations, with the United Nations providing the peace-keeping and the EEC the political action.

Unemployment, widespread poverty, the attraction of foreign lifestyles and the availability of new drugs is causing an alarmingly rapid increase in drug abuse in the seven Republics of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), according to a fact-finding mission of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP).

The four-member mission, headed by a former Minister of Justice of Colombia, Enrique Parejo Gonzalez, spent the month of April visiting Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Ukraine and Uzbekistan. The visit was in response to reports of escalating crime and drug abuse in the Republics of the former Soviet Union.

The mission's mandate was to evaluate the extent of drug abuse and illicit trafficking in each of the States, to assess the status of existing drug control legislation and structures, to draw up an inventory of needs and identify what assistance was required. They recommended, among other moves, the introduction of new anti-narcotic laws, the strengthening of drug law enforcement services and enhanced control of external borders. It also stressed the need to establish proper treatment and rehabilitation for drug addicts, pointing to the fact that till now most such services had been left to the initiative of voluntary organizations.

The General Assembly, resuming its forty-sixth session this morning, admitted Slovenia, Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina -- three former Yugoslav Republics -- to United Nations membership, bringing the total number of Member States to 178. Leading their delegations were the President of Croatia, Franco Tudjman, the President of Slovenia, Milan Kujan, and the Foreign Minister of Bosnia-Herzegovina, Haris Silajdzic.

Speaking at the three-part flag-raising ceremony following the admission, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said that each new admission brought the Organization closer to its goal of universality. He welcomed the new countries' "extraordinary blend of civilizations, religions, languages, customs and cultures".

However, he pointed out that "even as their flags are raised, hostilities and human suffering persist in their region". He said that he hoped that their flags would "symbolise ... peace, justice and respect for human rights, including the rights of minorities".

"Today represents a new beginning," he went on. "Let us hope that the membership of these three Republics in the United Nations will lead to healing and cooperation and that peace and prosperity may be restored to their region."

In separate news today, a United Nations spokeswoman announced that Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali has established a Task Force to monitor the situation in Yugoslavia, on "a continuous basis and to coordinate the United Nations role" in solving the crisis.

Members of the Task Force, which will meet at least three times a week, are Under-Secretaries-General Jan Eliasson, Marrack Goulding and Vladimir Petrovsky, and Senior Political Advisor Alvaro de Soto. The Task Force will be chaired by the Secretary-General.

Also this morning, the Assembly adopted resolutions appropriating $606 million for the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC) -- the largest peace-keeping operation in United Nations history -- and $39 million for the United Nations Observer Mission in El Salvador (ONUSAL) for their operation through 31 October.

That action, following the recommendations of the Fifth Committee (Administrative and Budgetary), reflected those of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) on the financing of both peace-keeping operations. The Secretary-General had requested $764,058,800 for the operation of UNTAC and $48,784,000 for ONUSAL.

In other action this morning, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to support Nicaragua's rehabilitation efforts in the areas affected by the eruption of the Cerro Negro volcano. In a resolution introduced by the representative of Nicaragua and adopted without a vote, the Assembly invited Member States, international organizations and United Nations agencies to respond generously during the emergency and rehabilitation process in Nicaragua.

The Assembly will meet again at a date to be announced.

The Secretary-General has recommended that the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), which has overseen the disengagement between Israeli and Syrian forces since 1974, be extended for a further period of six months, until 30 November 1992.

In his report to the Security Council on UNDOF, dated 19 May, in which he reviews the past six months, Mr. Boutros-Ghali said that while the Israel-Syria sector had remained generally quiet, the situation in the Middle East as a whole continued to be potentially dangerous. He said it was likely to remain so "unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached". He said he considered UNDOF's continued presence in the area to be essential, and the Governments of both Syria and Israel had agreed to the proposed extension.

Cuba has called on the Security Council to condemn an act of sabotage carried out against a Cubana Airlines aircraft in October 1976 and to urge the United States to provide information and evidence in its possession regarding the sabotage and the persons who planned, directed and carried it out.

Under a draft resolution introduced by Cuba last night at a formal meeting of the Council, the Council would ask the Secretary-General to seek United States cooperation in providing that information and in facilitating the investigation and punishment of the guilty parties so as to help eradicate international terrorism.

In his statement to the Council, the representative of Cuba, Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada, asked if the United States was reluctant to discuss the terrorist destruction of the Cuban airliner because the passengers who died "were dark-skinned" or because the plane destroyed was owned by a third world country. He said the United States, despite its international legal obligations, had not provided information that would have assisted in the prosecution of Orlando Bosch, the terrorist responsible for directing the sabotage of the Cubana Airliner.

Edward J. Perkins, in his first speech to the Security Council as the Permanent Representative of the United States, said that, by meeting to consider events that had occurred 15 years before, the Council was wasting valuable time. Cuba's attempt to portray his country as a harbourer of terrorists was absurd. He denied what he described as "fatuous allegations" that his Government was hiding Luis Posada Carriles, thought to be involved in the incident, and that it had supported the terrorist activity of Orlando Bosch.

A United Nations spokeswoman announced today that the Secretary-General will launch an appeal for $835 million "to assist 10 countries in Southern Africa affected by the worst drought in living memory" threatening 18 million people in the region with starvation.

The appeal will be announced at a meeting in the Trusteeship Council Chamber on Tuesday, 26 may, where the Secretary-General will address the drought crisis in southern Africa affecting, by some estimates, as many as 130 million people. On the same day, in Harare, Zimbabwe, countries of the Southern African Development Coordination Conference (SADCC) will launch the Consolidated United Nations/SADCC Appeal to mobilize the support which is desperately needed to respond to southern Africa's crisis. The scale of the drought emergency is described as "unprecedented" in its scale.

A Donors' Conference will be held in Geneva on 1 and 2 June to mobilize resources in response to the emergency Appeal, and non-governmental organizations involved in the relief effort will participate in a forum there on 2 June. The Appeal has also involved representatives of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank.

The Consolidated United Nations/SADCC Appeal seeks $685 million for food aid and $150 million for non-food related activities to benefit Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, Swaziland, United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe.
